LONDON Feb. 22—The war has caused a stump in the royal marriage market. Taging are at the present moment, ports, princes and princesses of marriageable age than there have been ton many years, but marriage is in abey woe for the time.

Besides the Princess Mary, who in the ordinary course of events would have had royal suitors, and Princess Maude of Fife, there are many young girls of royal birth ready for alliances. The larger number of eligible royal bridegrooms are German. It will be hard for them to find consorts now in other countries. In Russia the Grand Duke countries. In Russia the Grand Duke Constantine is twenty-six, while there are six other grand dukes on the list, most of them very wealthy. Roumania, Serbia, Bulgaria, and Montenegro have all eligible princes whose marriages will probably be the seal of Balkan treaties.

Chairman of Vacation Committee Gives Idea of Unemployment Situation-Young Women Do Not Want Good Positions Away From Metropolis.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.-Like a javelin thrust there comes out of the smoke of conflicting ideas on the subject of unemployment and the unemployed a series of definite opinions, backed up by actual facts, from Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, the chairman of the vaca- House over the bill. tion committee of New York.

Miss Smith yesterday gave utterance to her views on the un- able to make a report in a short time. employment situation.

"As with everything else," she began, "there are two sides to half question are nowhere near adjustunemployment. Everybody has a general idea that conditions are ment. A disagreement on this question terrible, but there are probably fewer than a baker's dozen in all this attempt is likely to be made to instruct big city who know just how bad they are and what are the chances the conferees to provide for an investiof their getting better.

GIRLS TIDED OVER.

"One swath at least has been cut through the jungle by war relief activities of the vacation committee. Since October we have been maintaining workrooms where girls thrown out of employment by the war have been kept busy and paid what we call a 'tide-over' wage. As its name would imply, this pay simply is to help the girls over this crisis until they can get regular jobs again.

"Out of all the other facts we discovered, as we opened one workroom after another, was the dismal fact that an amasing number of the girls were horribly inefficient.

"At first we went ahead putting stenographers in the sewing rooms, regardless of their chosen line of work. They had to do something, you see. Naturally, the work was not done with the greatest amount of speed or dexterity.

Aim For Efficiency.

"It dawned on us one day about a month ago, all of a sudden, when several of the vacaton committee were lunching together that it would be doing the greatest possible good to the great.

When the girls make war relief supplies over 600 girls.

"Dally dozens and dozens of girls apply for work. We haven't room enough for all who come to us.

"What is the point I want to make? Simply this. That in numberless cases it is the girl's own fault if she has not got a good job.

"Take the case of just one manufacturer. He tells us that he has an order on hand for 6,00,000 uniforms for one of the warring countries. His factory is in New Jersey, less than two hours' journey from New York. He wants girls to help out on this rush order. He is willing to pay them from $12 a week up.

"I wish I was dead," Gleason was heard to say.

"You wish you were dead?" repeated Cuffe. "Why don't you die?"

Fearing that Cuffe would become violent, one of the patients called Dr. S. G. Conger, house physician, who put a restraining jacket on Cuffe, and strapped him to his bed.

At 9:30 o'clock the inmates had retired, and Cuffe lay silent. Gleason was asleep. A moment later the orderly, Samuel J. Flynn, left the ward to make his rounds.

When Flynn left the room Cuffe began squirming about in his restraining sheet, straining to break his bonds. Suddenly the straps snapped, and Cuffe leaped to his feet, He snatched two wooden stools that stood by the foot of his bed, and, swinging them aloft, one in each hand, started for the bed where Gleason lay asleep.

The ward was in an uproar. The patients sprang from their beds, and tried to stop Cuffe, but the maniac tore through them with superhuman strength, sweeping them down with the stools.

Gleason slept through the noise and it was learned today.
